I was there. Floor? 800,000. Ceiling? 2 million. In my opinion, around 1.3 million.

Thank you for going. And also for your estimate.

It's a difficult thing to gauge because you have different elevations, numerous buildings obstructing your view, and everyone is moving all the time. But I will say I stood at the Ellipse on Wednesday at around 11 AM, and faced S, towards the Washington Monument, and I could not see a single blade of grass in the surrounding fields. That's how many people were there. To the E and W and there were even more supporters flooding in. It's probably the largest gathering for singular reason I'll ever see in my life.

▼ Washington Monument wasn't full. However, it was a lot of people. When they went to the Capitol people were using 3 streets to march there, but the streets weren't packed.

2 More than 500k. Maybe over a million. During his speech it was hard to get a grasp on how many people were there because of lack of visibility and differences in elevation due to the hill at the Washington Monument.

2 I was talking to an older lib lady. When I said a few hundred thousand she laughed. I said how many do you think? She said maybe 10K.
